

Bungles in the Wet

Trek through a wilderness where no vehicle can ever go

The only ground tour anyone offers that takes you to the Bungle Bungles in the wet season, and the only time of year with a chance of seeing Piccaninny Creek and the waterfalls flowing. Helicopter in, then on foot for two weeks with the park to yourselves.

Day by day

DAY 0

Fly to Kununurra

Daily air and bus services between Kununurra and Perth and Darwin; eastern states connect through Darwin. Pre trip meeting 6 pm in the outdoor area of the Kimberley Croc Lodge. If you cannot make it, advise the office well in advance.

DAY 1

Fly to the Bungles

Pick up between 6.30 and 7 am from your accommodation, if you gave the address a week before, otherwise from the front of the Kununurra Visitor Centre. Helicopter to the Bungles. Start walking with full packs. Bush camp.

DAYS 2 TO 13

Bush camping in Piccaninny Gorge

Full packs some days, day packs at other times, exploring the tributary gorges: some palm filled, some narrow enough to need a swim, some with caves that need a torch. The exact route depends on how much rain falls. Food drop collected on day 7 or 8.

Fly out and drop off at your accommodation. The itinerary is subject to change.

Included

- Helicopter flights in and out
- The services of the guide

- Evening meals on the walk
- A food drop mid trip

Not included

- Flights to Kununurra
- Your breakfasts and lunches
- Accommodation in Kununurra

Fitness and who it suits

It will be hot and humid, with an average maximum of 36 degrees and rain on average every third day, mostly in short, sharp bursts. Most day walks involve clambering over large rocks, some with steep climbs and thick spinifex. If you don't wish to do the rock scrambling, be prepared to relax and enjoy the surroundings while the others continue.

Grade: Hard. The long walk up Piccaninny Gorge over pebbles and sand is tiring; beyond the first base camp there is clambering over large rocks and at least one narrow ledge. Eleven days of food, with many day walks on day packs.

This suits you if

- You have walked in the wet season before or have read the wet season page in full
- You can carry eleven days of food
- You are happy to pack up and move camp if the creek rises

Probably not for you if

- You need a formed track or dry boots
- You are new to overnight bushwalking

What to bring

Carry

- ☐ A pack liner, essential at this time of year
- ☐ Fabric boots or runners that can stay wet for two weeks, not leather
.....
- ☐ Something light to wear around camp in case your main footwear fails
.....
- ☐ A light poncho or small umbrella rather than a heavy raincoat
.....
- ☐ Shellite for fuel stoves, since gas canisters cannot fly in
.....
- ☐ A torch for the caves
.....

Meeting point and getting there

Questions

How wet will it be?

Rain is very likely but not certain. Occasionally it rains for days, which makes walking harder and the waterfalls more spectacular. Occasionally it does not rain at all in two weeks, which makes it substantially hotter. Either way there will be places to swim.

What about flash floods?

The Piccaninny catchment is very small, so water rises and falls incredibly quickly, and small enough that there is always warning to move. The guides know where it is safe to camp and where to get out of the way.

Is there Aboriginal art?

Only a few small sites have been found in this area.

How to book

Send a request to book from the Bungles in the Wet page and Russell will confirm within a few days, longer if we are out of range on a walk. Groups are 4 to 12 walkers. $9,995 per person.
